Duke Bear Traps

The Duke #15 Bear Traps are replicas of the traps used in the 1800 when bear trapping was legal during the taming of the West. These traps feature cast steel jaws with serious teeth, cast pan and tempered long springs. The Bear Traps are not recommended for use. However, if you are looking for a serious fixture to decorate your home, cabin or store, these traps will surely stir some excitement..

Dog Proof Raccoon Traps

Duke Dog Proof Raccoon Trap

The Duke Dog Proof Coon Trap features a fully enclosed dog proof design with powerful coil springs, a sensitive trigger system and a straight spade staking system. The trap is fired when the raccoon reaches in for your bait, and instead grabs the trigger, firing the trap. When baiting Dog Proof Coon Traps; apply the lure or bait to a cotton ball or sheep's wool. Place below the trigger so the raccoon has to reach past the trigger to get the bait. New painted brown finish. Ready to go out of the box.

Cavins Trapping Lures & Baits

Minnesota Red

"Minnesota Red" (Red Fox Gland) - The "fox" comes out of the bottle at you when you open this one. This isn't a bottle of urine with a gland dragged through it, but rather very thick and heavy bodied.

HNT-36951.....4 oz.....$15.90

Minnesota Grey

(Grey Fox Gland) - This one is made with the same great care that goes into my red fox gland. A real killer whether used at post or dirt sets as it brings the grays in and makes them feel "comfortable" - until it's too late that is.

Thompson Cable Restraint Snares

Cable Restraints were designed for "live capture" and allow the release of undesired captures such as pets, deer, live stock and non target furbearers. Cable Restraint Systems are designed for land sets. Most Cable restraint Systems require the following items: Noose Release device to cause the noose to break open under a stated weight point. Relaxing Neck Lock to allow the noose to loosen slightly when the animal stops resisting the restraint device. Deer Stop to prevent the noose from closing smaller than a stated diameter or circumference (usually 2 1/2" diameter) Noose Stop to prevent the noose from opening up more than a stated diameter. Swivel to allow the system to rotate to prevent the wire from binding up.

Powder Keg Rice Bran Feeder

Fleming Traps has introduced the Powder Keg Rice Bran Feeder to its line of On Time Products. The introduction of many different products used for deer attractants has demanded a different approach to deliver many of the new powder base products. We have tested most of the products on the market today. On time's approach is a machine with extreme power to keep the powder base materials fluffed and fresh for delivery. To achieve this the powder keg is a new breed of machines using a gear reduction system which can move the entire hopper's content. This is done on a very slow but extremely powerful delivery.

On Time's newest type of feed-delivery system uses a patent-pending gear-driven motor to dispense powder or rice bran up to four times daily. The dispensing unit is used with a 20-gallon hopper and powered by eight C batteries (not included) that can be replaced without using tools.

Trapping Tips and Information

The Dirt Hole Set

Step 1. Dig a hole about 4 inches in diameter and 8 inches deep at a 45-degree angle. If possible, dig under a small bunch of grass that can serve as a backing. A dried cow chip, coyote droppings, bone or small piece of rotten wood can be used for a backing if grass is not available.

Step 2. Place the trap 2 to 3 inches from the hole to figure out how large to dig the trap's bed. Set the trap aside, and dig another hole an inch or so below the level of the ground and wide enough for the trap and stakes. Level and smooth the trap bed.

Step 3. After placing the trap in the freshly dug hole, secure it by driving a stake through the attachment on the swivel. For the stake, use a 1/2 re-enforcing rod stake at least 24 inches long with a nut or washer welded to the top end. If the ground is rocky, it may be difficult to drive the stake into the ground. If so, substitute two 18-inch re-enforcing rod stakes and drive them in the ground at 45-degree angles with a Double Stake Swivel. This also works well with wet or loose soil.

Step 4. Once the stakes are driven into the ground, place enough loose soil to bed the trap and firmly twist it into the dirt. The trap should be about an inch below the level of the ground. Once the trap is bedded in the hole, install a pan cover to keep the dirt away from the springs. Pan covers should be porous so that moisture, but not dirt, passes through. Wire, Denium or other cloth materials and fiberglass screen work well. They should be clean and free of odors. Cut the cover to fit under the jaws and over the pan of the trap. A trap with a 6-inch jaw spread requires a pan cover that is 6 inches wide and 8 or 9 inches long. In one end, cut a slit for the trigger mechanism.

Step 5. Pack loose soil around the trap and over the ends of the pan cover that extend out from the jaws of the trap. Pack the soil firmly all around the outside of the trap to bed the trap securely. This keeps the trap from tipping if the coyote steps on the soil outside the trap. If the soil dug from the hole is too wet or too coarse to use, find drier soil along protected cutbanks, under fallen logs or hay bales, or in buildings with dirt floors.

Step 6. Once the trap is firmly bedded and the pan cover installed, sift 1/4 to 1/2 inch of dry dirt over the trap. Use a wood or metal sifter pan to screen out all coarse dirt, rocks and other debris from the trap covering. The trap will work smoothly through the sifted-dirt covering.

Step 7. To make a place for the coyote to step as it approaches to investigate the lure, create a saucer-like depression in the dirt over the trap. The depression should be sloped slightly toward the opening of the dirt hole. Arrange small pebbles or clods of dirt carefully around the trap to guide the coyote into the trap, but be careful that pebbles or clods are not in the way of the trap jaws. Because coyotes like to step on smooth soil, this arrangement of pebbles or clods in conjunction with the saucer-like depression over the trap will do more to guide a coyote to step into the trap than will actual placement of the trap in relation to the dirt hole or lure.

Step 8. The last step in making the dirt-hole set is to add bait, lure or scent. The combination of two or more coyote lures in the hole make the set more appealing to a coyote and is more effective than using just one. Tainted meat bait, such as the flesh of beaver, bobcat, cattle or skunk, is a popular lure used in a dirt hole, but they deteriorate in hot weather. Many trappers use commercially available lures, which are more convenient and less messy than meat bait.

Step 9. Use at least two coyote trapping lures / baits in the dirt hole. Place a ball of sheep wool in the bottom of the hole and pour the lures on it, or pour the lures directly on the bottom of the hole. After the lures are applied, roll up a wad of dried grass and place it in the hole. Then place coyote gland lure, coyote urine or red fox urine on the backing. Coyote droppings can be used along with the gland lure or urine. If two or more dirt-hole sets are made in a close area, use a different combination of lures at each set to give each trap set a different smell.

Step 10. The finished dirt-hole set should look like an animal has dug a hole and strung the dirt back in the process. The dirt-hole set is effective partly because of its visual appeal. It also works well in areas with some grassy cover where other types of sets would be less obvious. Coyotes are attracted to bare dirt or mounds of dirt like gopher mounds, mole hills and badger dens. The addition of extra dirt in a trap-set location can make the set more attractive.

Trapping Tips and Information

Flat Set or Urined Post Set

Some of the most common flat sets are called “post sets” or “marker sets”. Fox and coyote are territorial animals and will lay claim to areas. If another animal comes into the area then they will chase them out of their territory. These animals will mark their territory by urinating on objects along their travel way. They will also leave dropping at the outer boundaries of their territory. Some examples of good areas for post sets are old farm roadways and trails.

For trap bedding instructions please see page 38 that reference the Dirt Hole Set. When bedding for a coyote remember to put the trap bed 4-7 inches farther back than that of the fox. You will want to make sure you blend your set with things in your areas like grass clipping. Remember fox generally will run in pairs so having two good sets in a location double your chances of a catch.

Lures: You will want to use a Gland Lure or Urine for post sets. You will not want to use a food lure in this type of set since it will be considered unnatural. When using the gland lure place it at the base or a few inches up the post. You will only need to use 3-5 drops of gland lure. If you use a urine use a squeeze bottle and squirt about 1 oz. of urine on the post. If you have some tall grass in the area you can squirt a small amount there also. You will have better luck if you use either a gland lure or urine at each set not both.

Posts: You can use many things as a good post such as: Charred Piece of Wood, Rocks, Old Logs, Clump of Grass Backing, Stump or Mound of Dirt.

Snaring Tips

Snare Set In A Hole Under A Livestock Fence

Snares designed to capture furbearers by the neck or leg are set directly in the center of the animal's movement path. Snares usually are held in an animal's movement path with one of several different support systems. One support that works particularly well can be constructed from a 36-inch piece of 11-12-gauge galvanized or 9-gauge soft wire. A “V” bend is made in the support wire about 4 inches from the end and driven into the ground with a notched rod to prevent the support from moving in the wind. The snare is wrapped around the support about three times and held in place by a “U” configuration formed in the upper end of the snare support. Bend the snare cable upward slightly, just inside the lock, so the snare loop is not closed by the wind (see Figure 1).

Attach snares to a solid object so captured animals cannot escape. A steel 1/2-inch diameter rebar, 24 to 30 inches long (depending on soil hardness), makes a good anchor. Attach snares to the rebar with a strong swivel to prevent tangling and breaking. Use a lead cable that is at least as strong as the snare cable to attach short snares to the rebar stake. Avoid using 9-gauge wire or several strands of 14-gauge wire to anchor snares to a rebar stake because they may bend back and forth, crystallize, and break. When used for beaver, snares also can be secured to a tree that is at least 6 inches in diameter or to the base of a large shrub such as a willow.

Snares set in holes under woven wire fences should be held in place about 1 to 2 inches from the fence with the snare support system described in Figure 1. The top of the snare can be as high as 3 inches above the bottom wire of the fence. Set the snare far enough away from the fence to prevent the lock from catching on the bottom wire of the fence. Hold the snares in place by clipping them to the bottom wire of the fence with a fine U-shaped wire such as a 1 1/2-inch piece of a paper clip that allows the snare to easily release. The bottom of the loop should be about 2 inches above the bottom of the hole or coyotes and foxes may be caught by a front leg. With either of the above snare support systems, anchor the snares to the heavy-gauge wire on the bottom of the fence. The upper wires on a woven wire fence usually are too weak to secure a snare.

Snares occasionally are placed in the field but left unset for one to two weeks. This placement allows trappers to quickly set snares when pelts become prime and reduces human scent at the site. Snares usually are set in the form of a round or oval loop. A round loop that is 12 inches in diameter can form an oval loop that is about 14 inches high and 10 inches wide. The following round loop diameters and heights above ground are recommended when snaring furbearers (Table 1). A 5/64- or 3/32-inch diameter galvanized aircraft cable is recommended for snaring coyotes, beaver, and raccoons. Foxes and bobcats can be captured in 1/16- to 3/32-inch-diameter snares.
