

Which Crib is Right for You?

It can be quite confusing to know what all the baby crib terminology is these days. We're here to help you understand the various crib types available and some key points about each.

Standard Crib

- Does not convert
- Less Expensive
- Great for parents will use a separate toddler bed, will move baby to a twin bed when ready, or who don't need a full bed.

Crib & Changer Combo Crib

- All-In-One Crib with attached changing table.
- Crib may or may not convert
- Changing table may convert to a side table.
- Good space saver for small nurseries.

Travel or Portable Crib

- May have wheels
- May fold for easy storage
- Can fit through doorways to move from room to room.
- Great for grandma's house

Convertible Crib

- Heavy duty construction
- Larger Footprint
- Toddler safety rail may or may not be included.
- Full bed conversion nearly always requires separate purchase.
- Great for parents planning ahead for the changing needs of their child.

Mini Crib

- Smaller crib
- Less expensive
- May convert to a twin bed with conversion rails.
- Great for small nurseries, twins, & shared rooms.

Round or Oval Crib

- Unique looking
- Gives baby a 'nest' feel
- May convert
- Great for center room placement.

2 in 1 Crib

- Converts from Crib to Twin bed (mini cribs) or some convert into toddler beds (full size cribs).

3 in 1 Crib

- Converts to a toddler bed with safety rail or a daybed (no front rail) OR may convert from toddler bed to a full bed.

4 in 1 crib / Lifetime Crib

- Converts to a toddler bed (with safety rail), to daybed, to full bed with headboard and footboard.
